

Give us something that uplifts you every day.

It could be the face of a friend or loved one.
A beautiful view you have witnessed.
It could be a moment or photograph.
It could be standing deep within nature.
Our eyes are the windows to the soul. It has been said:
Visual impressions travel to a different side of the brain than words.
Seeing something beautiful goes straight to the heart.
Feed your heart everyday.

Chasing the Light

Images across time from near and far
At the Farm House Cafe
- You are invited to -
The Artist's Reception
Saturday, July 23rd, 5-7PM

Three Agency, Montana

Many of these images are inspirations of the images shown at the Battle of the Greasy Grass (Battle of the Little Bighorn, General Custer's last stand).

"Chasing the Light" includes images from Sri Lanka, Guatemala, Mexico and the American Southwest.

"Any photographer will tell you, it's not the lens, it's on the camera, it's the light. Chasing the light is both a reality and a metaphor. I think of light as a specific energy that resonates with things of the spirit, a high frequency of awareness. An element of inspiration.

Throughout my life I have been drawn to the natural world, the culture of Original Peoples, the wisdom of ancient times.

Things and events that are inspiring to me. Having a camera in my hands gives me a good reason to learn about and record whatever my curiosity and creative heart see.

Visitors will also be treated to the award-winning book, Spirit in Form: the Human Form in Nature and Other Places.

"What all of beauty was not seen and could speak, whose would the human soul be?"
